

IRISH PAGES

A JOURNAL OF CONTEMPORARY WRITING

Friends of Irish Pages

The Friends of Irish Pages is a generous group of readers, writers, business organizations and foundations whose financial contributions help advance the work of IRISH PAGES: A JOURNAL OF CONTEMPORARY WRITING. The journal gratefully acknowledges this financial assistance on one dedicated page of every issue.

In this difficult economic climate, not only the book trade, but the culture of classic print itself, is under pressure as never before. The continuing support of the Friends of Irish Pages is essential to the vitality and independence of Ireland's premier literary journal.

With the largest print run of any Irish literary periodical, IRISH PAGES represents – uniquely for the island – the intersection of a large general readership with outstanding writing from Ireland and overseas. Each issue assembles a carefully edited mix of English and Irish, prose and poetry, fiction and non-fiction, style and subject matter, in an overall fit aimed at a wide range of reading tastes. For the Irish resident, no less than the Irish expatriate or the overseas reader, IRISH PAGES offers an unrivalled biannual window on the literary and cultural life of these islands – and further afield.
